New Delegation Centralizes Largest Superfund Cleanup Decisions

In a move designed to streamline approvals of and ensure consistency among the largest Superfund cleanups, EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt last week approved a new delegation of authority giving him and his yet-to-be-named deputy the final signature authority to approve large Superfund cleanups over $50 million. Prior to the revision, approval authority rested with EPA's 10 regional administrators and the assistant administrator of the Office of Land and Emergency Management.

Some are hailing the change as a necessary improvement in a cumbersome Superfund process that often slows cleanup of the nation's most complicated and contaminated sites; however, those familiar with the workings of EPA may recognize that the change may produce a logjam in the administrator's office, as scientifically and legally complicated decisions and documents are routed to a single person for signature.

Potentially responsible parties, citizens, and other stakeholders will now be required to navigate the bureaucracy of EPA's Washington, D.C. headquarters.

About Greenberg Traurig's Environmental Practice

Greenberg Traurig's Environmental Practice assists clients with issues under the environmental and natural resource laws that affect their businesses. The firm's environmental attorneys, some of whom previously worked at EPA headquarters, assist with securing permits and approvals; negotiate and close transactions; defend clients in enforcement actions; handle a broad range of environmental and toxic tort litigation; ensure the understanding and satisfaction of regulatory requirements; prepare for and respond to emergencies; craft approaches for legacy cleanup issues; and develop solutions for product regulation, market access, and environmental policy challenges.
